Cooking Food for Stock. A good many farmers have tried cooking stock feed, and have after a few months, abandoned it, on the supposition that it did not pay. This has undoubtedly proved true with many where their labor and feed costs any particular sum worth naming, as it is ound that soaked corn, or soaked meal for swine, is relished as well or better than cooked food, and if it has a less tendency to fatten, the difference is not great, and perhaps no difference has been proven. Hence we find abandoned feed steamers all over the country, the owners having gone back to the old-fashioned ways. We have before taken occasion to say that for young pigs, soaked corn is the equal of any other feed excepting milk. It is equally val-uable for older swine. But while this is true of corn, it is not true of potatoes We have referred in another place to the value of cooked potatoes for swine, especially cooked and mixed with cooked or raw meal, and allowed to ferment slightly. It has been asserted, and we think the statement may be quite correct, that of all the vegetables in use for milch cows, potatoes are doubtless the most valuable in the raw state. The cooking of potatoes for cows has not been much practiced. vet the following shows the very favorable result of experiments made in Germany by Dr. Wolff. We invite especial attention to this, because there is a lesson embodied in it, of no mean value A reporter who accompanied Cete-it relieves their owners from work in varied with other materials, potatoes were added in succession, first raw, and then cooked. The result was that with raw potatoes the ration gave 2821 pounds of milk per week, yielding 61 pounds of butter; while with cooked potatoes it gave 248½ pounds of milk, yielding 9½ pounds of butter. This showed that milk from cooked potatoes, though 34 pounds less in quantity, was so far improved in quality as to yield nearly half as much again in butter. In other words the gain of butter from cooking the potatoes was 21 pounds per week for each cow, which is equal to 100 pounds in forty weeks, and a herd of ten cows, would make difference of about 1,000 pounds per year. Thus it appears that the testimony of the German experiment is, in this case, in harmony with the views of

The People of New York City. It is commonly said that New York

is, in respect of population, substantially a foreign city; that more than 600,000 of its denizens are of alien birth. The number of Irish citizens is usually given in round numbers at 400,-000; of Germans at 200,000; of French at 25,000; of Italians, Spaniards and Cubans at 15,000. This is an exaggeration, and a great one. The native population exceeds the foreign by about 125,000. According to the census of 1870, there were 201,999 Irish, 24,442 English, 7,562 Scotch, 151,216 Germans, 8,265 French, 2 794 Italians, 2,737 Austrians, 2,393 Poles, 2,178 Swiss, 1,237 Hollanders, 1,151 Russians. This is a very large proportion of foreigners, certainly, but nothing like the proportion generally supposed. There were then 13,072 colored persons, who are putting the number as high as 1,000. The census of 1880 will show many Il I want to ask of you, and you can ontinue your promenade!" changes, and probably a notable increase in population, especially as two wards have been added since 1870. It is estimated that 50,000 men and at right women are employed in Philadelphia in ( a can be bed, I a the manufacture of clothing, and 20,- by wh 000,000 suits are made there every year. Cutting machines are gradually inding their way into all of the large manufacturing establishments of the city. The machines have a capability of cutting nearly eighteen hundred garments in a day of twelve hours, or about equal to the combined results of the labor of eight men. Buttonholes also can be worked by machinery at the rate of one hundred and eighty per hour, while by hand it would take the same period to complete three holes. By the cutting machines folds of cloth forty ply thickness can be easily cut through. An instance of the value of machinery in expediting manufacture is afforded in the fact that the establishment where cutting and buttonhole machines are used turns out one hundred suits ready for wear in twelve hours.

Pilgrimages to Buffalo, N. K., are made by thousands of invalids annually to consult with the medical and surgical staff of the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, the largest private sanitarium in the world. All chronic diseases are treated by scientific methods. The practice is divided among nine eminent specialists. Among the most popular domestic medicines in the land are those manufactured by this Association, among which are Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the greatest of alteratives or blood-cleansers, and Dr. Pierce's Pellets (little pills) that have largely superseded the old-fashioned coarse pills. Compound Extract of Smart-Weed is deservedly popular as a remedy for diarrhosa, dysentery, flux and kindred diseases; also as a pain-killer and remedy for colds. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the great remedy for female weakness and associated derangements. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is the "Old Reliable." A reporter who accompanied Cetewayo on his voyage to Simon's Bay, says: "In the surf boat Cetewayo had his first experience of sea sickness, and if he wanted to be shot when caught by Major Marter, it is certain that he wished he were dead ten minutes after embarking. All the dignity with which Cetewayo had borne his captivity gave way as he saw the sea and realized his fate, while the antics of the whole party in the surf boat are said to have been to a place of rest or forgetfulness.

Rev. Sheldon Jackson, of this city, synodical missionary of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Montana, recently made a visit to Alaska, and while there saw many interesting things. He gives an account of a visit made to a garden owned by a Mr. Davidson, of Fort

At the upper end of Mr. Davidson's garden he saw a white sheet stretched between two poles and looking as if it might be intended for a scare-crow. Upon inquiry he found that it contained "good taste" we like; and it is also a good point for a dellar store.—New Hater and it is also a scription; what islands of magnitude that contain navigable rivers, large fertile plains and mountains?

Professor Schmidt thinks that sponges may be propagated "by cutting the live ones into small pieces, attaching them to lumps of rock, and sinking them to proper depths" in the sea. We have seen a few live sponges that we would not object to seeing this experiment tried upon, even if there wasn't the shade of a shadow of a hope that they would propagate worth a cent.—Beston Transcript.

—Some of the newspapers publish a "useful domestic recipe" every day. The other day in place of the recipe, one of the papers published the following notice: "We sincerely trust that our readers will forgive us Yesterday of the recipe ginning to acknowledge this is a good of the tree two poles, about eight feet of the recipe ginning to acknowledge this is a good of the tree two poles, about eight feet on the papers will forgive us Yesterday of the chain of human history; that we have as yet picked up but a bright pebble of thought or glittering shell of theory, while before us lies the whole vast sea of human history unexplored. That we are beginning to acknowledge this is a good of the tree two poles, about eight feet on the papers and the whole set on fire amid the wails and superstitious incantations of hired mourners.

In about an hour the body was consumed. After the fire had cooled down, the ashes were carefully gathered up, and placed in a basket until a suitable box could be carved for their permanent preservation. When all was ready, an old Indian woman, bowed down with age and infirmities, took up the basket and started for a pine tree, which had previously been selected for the purpose. She was followed by the mourners and friends with bowed heads and loud wails of sorrow. At the base of the tree two poles, about eight feet

If slaves are then sacrificed fate, while the antics of the whole party in the surf boat are said to have been ludicrous. Nothing could persuade them to sit down quietly, and when they moved they did so crawling on all fours.

"Cetewayo was placed on deck, inasmuch as the builders of the Natal never contemplated carrying a passenger who would require that four wives should sleep in his cabin with him. In the kraal His Maiesty occupied a central death is small, and the soul is carried to a place of rest or forgetfulness. Then after a long time it comes back to some descendant on its sister's side and lives another life. To such superstitions these people are bound, body and soul, and to rescue them from this, ameliorating and elevating their condition in this life, and presenting to them a glorious immortality through the crucified and risen Savior, is the work of the Board of Home Missions.
